The Calm Before the Mystery

Hey everyone,

This month's newsletter isn't going to be anything exciting, at least not yet. I'm right on the edge of a lot of different things, but I don't want to count my eggs before they hatch, so I'm staying quiet for now.

There's a lot I could update you on, and believe me, 6 or 7 months ago I probably would've shared every little thing I considered an update. But I think the more I grow, the less I feel like a lot of those things are actual updates. That's probably a good thing.

What I can say is that even with two of the three ice cream shop locations closed for the season, there's still a strong demand for the Mystery Machines. It's obviously less than before, but it's higher than I expected, and it's really cool that people are going out of their way just to visit the machines.

The mystery drink of the month has to be Ruby Red Squirt. It's a rare Squirt variant, with flavorful ruby red grapefruit flavoring, but get this, it's got 39mg of caffeine too. It's a perfect pick-me-up without giving you a headache. 9 out of 10.

Much more to come next month.

Until next time,
Mystery Man
